Of Interest to Women

HEAVY QUALITY OF SATIN IS WORN.

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE.

ence of The Star NEW YORK, August 15.-The very week that we established ourselves comfortably in serge, silk jersey and various other summer fabrics the French designers, abetted by the American dressmakers, informed us that satin was to be the fashionable fabric.

The statement worked out true. As long ago as the first of June the women who always try to keep ahead, and not abreast, of the fashions began wearing afternoon frocks of satin and crepe, and, at the same time, the wom-en at country clubs and at the sea-shore substituted a heavy quality of satin for silk jersey and wore sport suits of it.

If our women insist upon wearing peltry all summer its addition to satin strikes one as being a bit more suitable than to jersey. France has no hesitation in lavishly employing both schemes of dressing. They write me from Paris that one can hardly see the material of a frock for the fur, and over here, whenever a woman has the daring or the money to band her sport suit with peltry, she does it.

Immense collars and cuffs of angora are put on sweaters as a substitute for are put on sweaters as a substitute for fur, and the effect is much the same. Wherever one goes, from a smart city restaurant to the farthermost stretches of the Maine woods, it would appear from the clothes of the women, that we were experiencing another summer like the famous one a century ago, when the snow never melted and the sun never shone and when war also was trying its best to devastate the earth three times a day in many houses has passed and most of us are glad of this fact. Potatoes for breakfast are nowadays a rarity, excepting in some country districts. And many persons forego them for luncheon. This abstention is not because the fashions usually look better on the thin than on the fat. It is simply because in the ast few years a tremendous change has taken place in the food habits of he American people.

Probably quick means of transportation and adequate means of refrigera-tion have much to do with this change. In the days when, even in the big cities, ng potatoes clung to us throughout

The material chosen for this blue is usually a corded silk, and not satin. When a dressmaker like Cheruit, for instance, wants to show a good deal of this blue coloring she adds to her top-cont an antique hood, which is so large that it suggests, in a satirical way.

The sketch of today shows a coat which one well dressed woman finds an admirable garment, as she wears it for all day and evening emergencies, in an antique hood, which is so large that it suggests, in a satirical way.

The material of the coat is a thin cloth, the cut is easy and supple, it covers the larger part of the skirt and list fanciful cape, collars and cuffs give it an air of distinction.

Poor Jumpy Buster Bear.

Oh. Buster Bear, oh. Buster Bear, What makes your heart so thumby? How is it you, so big and strong, Can be so very jumpy?

Dear me, what a lot of things can happen from one small beginning! You drop a stone in a pond and at once start a lot of little waves in the shape of rings that travel and travel and grow bigger and bigger until at last they reach the shore and once more the pond is quiet and smooth. That stone is a little thing of no account in itself, but the ripples it starts cover the whole pond. It is just that way in life. green vegetables in winter were expensive and often difficult to get, we necessarily ate of heavier food in cold weather. We could not get the variety of light food that we get nowadays, and turnips, cabbages, carrots, parsnips beets and potatoes necessarily made up a big part of our winter vegetable diet. And the winter-formed habit of eating potatoes clums to use throughout fallen.

It was just like that when a mischlevous wandering Little Breeze found Farmer Brown's Boy sitting half hidden on the bank of the pond of Paddy the Beaver and carried the smell of him out to tickle the nose of Buster Bear, who was having a bath and beautiful time as well swimning about in Paddy's now Mayn's wasn't If rice or macaroni is served at dinner, potatoes even then are not necessary. But if they are well prepared, potatoes once a day are not tiresome, even in this age of variety in food.

New potatoes, when they are small and of good flavor, are never better than when served simply boiled, with a little melted butter and minced parsley. They can also be served whole, when small, with a well made white sauce poured over them. They should, of course, always be very hot.

The larger new potatoes are delicious baked, and one of the hotels

The larger new potatoes are delicious baked, and one of the hotels prepares them in this way. The potatoes are scrubbed and then rubbed lightly with lard or butter. They are then scored around the middle with a sharp steel knife and are then baked thoroughly in a medium-hot oven. Then the potatoes are broken open halfway around the middle, and into the break—which allows the steam to escape—a large teaspoonful of butter and a small tablespoonful of tomato catsup are put.

Lattleed potatoes are delicious with chops and steake. To make these, pare the potatoes and then cut them with a lattice cutter. Place them in cold water, cover with a plate and a weight, and let stand for half an hour in the safe let stand for half an hour in the refrigerator. Then drain, and dry on a towel. Place in a frying basket, square cube of bread light brown in one him so that he had simply let go and dropped from that tree clear to the ground, covering himself with bumps, but worse still, having to leave half that delicious honey. After this he had gone to the pond of Paddy the Beaver, and in the comfort of a peaceful swim had almost
